TCS this past week:

WATSON- Have been talking about things they want to try and get better at for 2025! In science they are learning about different types of food.

TAJIRI- Had their first swimming lesson. They also enjoyed doing a science experiment on sound waves using a tuning fork and water. Some sea monkeys have also joined their class.

THUNBERG- Have started a new topic of Space. They have watched some NASA clips and made their own solar system with different planets.

WILLIAMS- Have been captivated by events in our focus novel Shadow, by Michael Morpurgo. This led to conversations about what being an asylum seeker means.

GRANDIN- Have been looking at different ways numbers have been written in the past, they looked at ancient Egyptian numbers and the way Babylonians would have written numbers in clay.

DAVIS- Have been looking at different texts which explore the theme of Dystopian fiction, they have enjoyed reading the extracts and sharing their utopian about Utopian society.

TURING- Have been star bakers this week, baking bread from scratch in cooking.

EILISH- Have made soda bread in cooking and have begun working on budgeting in PLG for their careers work.

LAWSON- Made positive start to the week. In cooking they demonstrated great independence and baked delicious soda bread.

BEADLE- Have been enjoying trying new experiments in Science and have begun a unit on 19th Century Literature in English.

ELON- Some of pupils have completed functional skills exams in Maths and English. In Science they have worked on genetics, and selective breeding. In English they have focused on paper one and completed some descriptive language pieces.
