TCS this past week:

Watson – Have been acting out different emotions in small groups, while the rest of the class guessed the emotion by answering different questions, such as “Which zone is it in?”

Tajiri – Have been writing their own stories using capital letters, full stops, and expanded phrases.

Thunberg – Have enjoyed exploring the historical truths behind the Greek myth of Theseus and the Minotaur in History.

Williams – Have continued to read their class book, ‘The Battle for Roar’. They were inspired by one of the main characters, Crowky, and wrote their own short stories that included him.

Grandin – Have been united in a strong dislike of ‘K-Pop Demon Hunters’. During English, they engaged in a lively debate about why it should be taken off Netflix.

Davis – Have been learning about Africa. They learnt about Ghana and the items that it exports. The class produced ideas for new Fairtrade chocolate bars, including the ingredients and packaging.

Turing – Have enjoyed making a pasta dish in cooking. Many of the class had a great time at Hilltop, participating in activities such as climbing and zip lining.

Eilish – Have been enjoying Humanities, where they have been learning about the First World War, and Science, where they completed an experiment testing for glucose and observed a colour change.

Lawson – Have been focusing on Language Paper 2 and have started to analyse the poem ‘Storm on the Island’ by Seamus Heaney.

Beadle – Have been focusing on familiarising themselves with accommodated practice papers across their subjects.

Banneker – Have been spending time on GCSE exam practice papers. Some of the class went to Hilltop and worked together well as a team.
