

Art and Design at The Cavendish School

“The arts are not mere diversions from the important business of education; they are essential resources”.

Elliot W Eisner

Art and Design embody some of the highest forms of human creativity. Art reflects and shapes our history and contributes to the culture, creativity and wealth of the world. It is an inspiring, rigorous and practical subject which uses creativity and imagination to experiment, invent and create, as well as providing visual, tactile and sensory experiences. The arts, including dance, drama, music and visual arts, are all powerful modes of communication through which pupils explore and construct a sense of self, achieve their aspirations and provide a unique way of understanding and responding to the world.

By learning about the arts, students can develop a range of essential skills. Unlike more practical subjects like science or math, the arts require pupils to become emotionally involved. Creative subjects like art and design, all require students to reach inside themselves and to use their own feelings, thoughts, ideas, and emotions.

Developing key skills and knowledge through participation in Art and Design

The arts aren't only valuable as stand-alone subjects; they are, in fact, an ideal link between every subject in our school's curriculum. Not only that, but they are also a fantastic form of delivery for those concepts, recognising that students may enter an understanding of a particular subject from many contrasting starting points (Barnes, 2015).

Learning through and about art and design enriches the experience of education as well as preparing students for life after school. Art and design encourage self-expression and creativity and can build confidence as well as a sense of individual identity.

Studying art and design through history helps us to understand different historical contexts and the ways that art has been deployed throughout history to inform and persuade audiences.

Pupils will explore the ideas and meanings in the work of artists, craftspeople and designers. They learn about the diverse roles and functions of art, craft and design in contemporary life, and in different times and cultures. Understanding, appreciation and enjoyment of the visual arts have the power to enrich our personal and public lives.

School priorities and vision

Our school's mission statement is 'Enabling the Self'. As an International Baccalaureate School, our school has a variety of values that we feel are essential to our students' development and journey with us. These are:

The Art and Design curriculum is designed to incorporate all aspects of our IB learning statements in order to create well rounded students. At the end of their school journey, our students will be:

- Knowledgeable about influential artists, craft makers and designers
- Be reflective about the similarities and differences in practises and disciplines
- Moral through consideration of Art as an expression of self
- Able to celebrate the differences in cultural art forms
- Able to think critically and develop a more rigorous understanding of forms of art
- Caring in feedback and subject matter, use art as expression of world need and improvement (UNESCO)
- Able to communicate their thoughts, feelings and ideas in a variety of ways
- Able to give a balanced view on different mediums, expressions and artists.
- Confident in inquiring about historic and current artists and their relevance
- Have the courage to explore and share their own ideas and experiences

Art and design enables us to look within and to listen to ourselves, realize who we are, and what we care about. It connects us to our thoughts, feelings, perceptions, and our outer realities and experiences. At The Cavendish School our mission is to create learning that allows our students to become happy and confident individuals who can be fully immersed in their communities. Art and design will teach our students that aims can be held flexibly; that the goal one starts with can be changed midway in the process as unexpected opportunities arrive, that problems can have more than one solution, and to exercise judgement by looking inside themselves and calculating conclusions. These are just a selection of the vital attributes of art and design, which can support our children to enjoy learning, achieve their potential and develop key skills they need to thrive as independent, emotionally and socially confident young adults.

Students have the opportunity to develop their art and design skills beyond key stage three via a GCSE or Arts Award course.

References

Barnes, J. (2015) Cross-Curricular Learning 3-14. 3rd edn. London: SAGE Publications Ltd, p.171.